SINGAPORE: The Crown Prince of the Principality of Liechtenstein is in Singapore for an official visit.

This is Prince Alois' second official visit to Singapore.

The Prince was given a welcome ceremony at the Istana on Thursday.

He then paid a courtesy call on President Tony Tan Keng Yam and met with Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong.

Mr Lee also hosted an official dinner in honour of Prince Alois.

Mr Lee said he looks forward to strengthening Liechtenstein-Singapore relations.

He said the opening of Liechtenstein's Consulate in Singapore reflects its commitment to bilateral cooperation.

It also raises the profile of Liechtenstein in Singapore.

Mr Lee said: "Our bilateral cooperation is strong, even though we only established diplomatic relations in 2010. Earlier, Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Finance Tharman Shanmugaratnam and Minister Frick (Liechtenstein's Foreign Minister Dr Aurelia Frick) signed an Avoidance of Double Taxation Agreement. This will boost trade and investment between our two countries.

"I am also glad that you have brought a business delegation to Singapore. I hope they are excited about the opportunities in Asia, and see value in using Singapore as a springboard to the region."

Prince Alois said: "The talks we had today, we identified many areas where we can help each other, where we can bring in initiatives, not only the ones already well on the way, like the Global Governance Group, and one thing which is for us very helpful, with such visits to Singapore, is that we can learn from you on how you do certain things."
